

ABSTRACT

A photoelectric conversion device comprising a semiconductor and an organic electrically conducting agent, wherein the organic electrically conducting agent exhibits a melting temperature T_m which is lower than the operation temperature of the photoelectric conversion device.